1809 Covington Drive, Ann Arbor

Imagine a home that energizes you every morning. That's what Meadowlark did for these homeowners. This remodeling project revitalized a 1960s ranch in the Dicken neighborhood of Ann Arbor by creating a modern, functional, and dynamic multi-generational hub for busy life.

The key areas remodeled include the kitchen, dining room, main entrance, living room, and in-law suite. The project involved substantial modifications to the layout by converting closed-off spaces into a family gathering place, which improved the home's overall functionality. Updates to the appliances and finishes enhance the home's aesthetic appeal.

Specific requests included creating an open-concept kitchen and dining area, installing a coffee station, adding a functional island and much-needed storage, improving the connection to the backyard for gatherings and their beloved family pet, and building a new deck.

The project also involved consolidating two bedrooms to create a larger one for the homeowner's mother, who lives with them. Meadowlark achieved the goal of creating a beautiful, comfortable, and welcoming home that met the homeowners' needs and preferences without requiring a move or expanding the house's footprint.
